Your Overhaul

FUEL INJECTOR.

Performance And Reliability. Everytime.

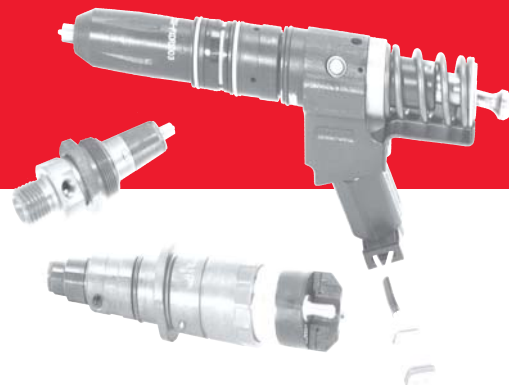

It makes perfect sense to replace all of your injectors during an overhaul. First, it gives you the assurance of knowing that your injectors are operating at peak efficiency to deliver maximum performance and fuel economy. Second, it's a proactive decision that eliminates the risk of labour charges during the warranty period just in case an injector failure occurs after the overhaul.

Don't Play Injector Roulette.

It doesn't make sense to gamble with non-genuine injectors – especially CELECT. Getting a CELECT injector to original performance specifications is 20 times more complicated than ordinary injectors. In other words, you can't just clean and rebox a CELECT injector and hope for the best. Mechanical injectors have one high pressure sealing joint while CELECT injectors have ten. In addition CELECT injectors have a much tougher cleanliness requirement and are much more difficult to assemble. Even if a rebuilder could assemble a CELECT injector, they would have no idea if it worked unless they obtained very specialized testing equipment. Plus there are critical hydraulic flow specifications that must be met in order for the engine to idle properly. Assessment of these characteristics requires additional specialized equipment that is only available to Cummins.

Simply stated, if you buy CELECT injectors that are not genuine Cummins ReCon, sooner or later you are probably going to have problems.

The Difference Is Genuine. Everywhere.

If you ever get the chance to visit the Cummins ReCon injector plant, you will understand why a CELECT injector live up to it's reputation. It looks more like a sophisticated laboratory and everything is the latest in Cummins fuel systems technology. And clean? That's an integral part of the process – even dirt that cannot be seen by the naked eye is filtered and eliminated when CELECT injectors are being remanufactured.
